JAMES W. LAMBERT SHOT DEAD SATURDAY

James Wayne Lambert, age 47, of Route two, Troy, was killed Saturday night in an exchange of gunfire with two other men. The shooting occurred at "Grace's," a night-spot just north of the Coffee-Pike County Line.

Arrested and charged with first degree murder were L. Q. Crawford, Jr., of Route 2, Troy, and Jesse Franklin Gatlin, of Jack. Both men were released on $3,000 bond, according to Pike County Sheriff Harold Anderson.

Anderson stated that the men would be bound over to a Grand Jury but an indictment is not expected.

Crawford was identified as a son-in-law to the dead man and Gatlin is reportedly an employee of Grace's, where the shooting took place.

According to witnesses at the scene, Lambert entered the building at approximately 9:40 and quarreled with his ex-wife, Mrs. Marilyn Lambert, of Route one, Jack, and threatened her with a knife. When Crawford intervened in the quarrel, Lambert allegedly attacked him with the knife and Crawford struck him with a chair, apparently breaking his nose.

After being hit with the chair, Lambert retreated and reportedly told Crawford he was going home to get a gun. Between 10:00 and 10:15, Lambert returned to the store and fired a 12 gauge shotgun blast through a screen door. Crawford and Gatlin returned the fire. Crawford with a .38 revolver and Gatlin with a .32 automatic.

Gatlin and Crawford apparently each fired one shot with one bullet striking Lambert in the chest and the other grazing his head. Pike County Coroner, Alan Booth, said the state toxicologist's lab performed an autopsy Monday but has not determined from which gun the fatal bullet was fired.

Investigating the shooting along with Sheriff Anderson and Coroner Booth were Chief Deputy Carl Phillips and deputies Leon Williams and Ed Wheeler.

How The Trust Fund Came To Be

With a view of giving education a badly needed new deal, Governor Bibb Graves and a forward looking legislature passed the Equalization Law and established the Alabama Special Educational Trust Fund in 1971.

The Equalization Law was the first attempt made by the state to correct inequalities of educational opportunities which existed among the counties in Alabama.

At the same time a store license tax was levied and earmarked for the Trust Fund. Since that time the following taxes have been added: Sales Tax in 1973, Income Tax in 1974 (Constitutional Amendment No. 61 ratified Sept. 1974), additional Tobacco Tax in 1974, Utilities Tax in 1974.

In 1974, Insurance Companies Tax in 1974, in addition, a Beer Tax was levied in 1963 for support of the state trade schools and junior colleges is paid into the Trust Fund. A Rental and Leasing Tax levied to accrue to Trust Fund and to finance medical education and mental health bonds was passed in 1971.

In 1971, the Alabama Special Educational Trust Fund is the principal source of all education funding. The minimum program receives a major appropriation from the Trust Fund, but in addition, 13 senior colleges, 45 trade schools and junior colleges, 2-4 medical schools and 2-2 50 other educational facilities all receive their appropriations from this source.

The Trust Fund was set up to protect educational revenues. Past experience has illustrated the necessity for this and the dire consequences suffered by Alabama youth when such funds are not available.

Recollections of deprivation resulting from inadequate school funds remain fresh in the mind of educators. Determination to maintain and strengthen the Educational Trust Fund is strong. Any attempt to unseam the Trust Fund or to divert monies from it are viewed as an attack on the future of Alabama youth.

How The Trust Fund Came To Be

With a view of giving education a badly needed new deal, Governor Bibb Graves and a forward looking legislature passed the Equalization Law and established the Alabama Special Educational Trust Fund in 1971.

The Equalization Law was the first attempt made by the state to correct inequalities of educational opportunities which existed among the counties in Alabama.

At the same time a store license tax was levied and earmarked for the Trust Fund. Since that time the following taxes have been added: Sales Tax in 1973, Income Tax in 1974 (Constitutional Amendment No. 61 ratified Sept. 1974), additional Tobacco Tax in 1974, Utilities Tax in 1974.

In 1974, Insurance Companies Tax in 1974, in addition, a Beer Tax was levied in 1963 for support of the state trade schools and junior colleges is paid into the Trust Fund. A Rental and Leasing Tax levied to accrue to Trust Fund and to finance medical education and mental health bonds was passed in 1971.

In 1971, the Alabama Special Educational Trust Fund is the principal source of all education funding. The minimum program receives a major appropriation from the Trust Fund, but in addition, 13 senior colleges, 45 trade schools and junior colleges, 2-4 medical schools and 2-2 50 other educational facilities all receive their appropriations from this source.

The Trust Fund was set up to protect educational revenues. Past experience has illustrated the necessity for this and the dire consequences suffered by Alabama youth when such funds are not available.

Recollections of deprivation resulting from inadequate school funds remain fresh in the mind of educators. Determination to maintain and strengthen the Educational Trust Fund is strong. Any attempt to unseam the Trust Fund or to divert monies from it are viewed as an attack on the future of Alabama youth.

The human body is a complicated machine. Delicate set springing forth and lasting. The human body can be compared in many ways to the automobile. The human body has 200,000 moving parts. The car works fine, but cold weather brings on a different story. The battery must be in excellent condition, or it won't run the car in the winter. Maybe there is a reason we take more colds, have more sickness and feel worse in the winter. Cold weather requires more energy—more battery power—in a person.

But with in cold weather. Watch exposure to extreme weather conditions—and you'll find more energy and power to run your complicated system. Whenever you need health aids and supplies—visit our store. We deal in "good health" and stand ready to serve your needs.

COFFEE NEWS & CHAT

By Sara E. Hutchinson

DIABETES AND DIETETIC FOODS. Originally, diabetic foods, added sugar. Often, a sugar substitute was used. Today diabetic foods are prepared for use by those on low sodium, low fat, low carbohydrate, low cholesterol, allergic and diabetic diets.

NEW FOOD AND DRUG ADMINISTRATION regulations on labeling regulations on labeling make it easier for the consumer to compare the diabetic foods with conventional foods. If the amount of significant nutrients is not much different, the conventional food, because it is usually less expensive, is the one to buy.

Diabetics should be wary of soft drinks that do not clearly state caloric content on the label. Only a soft drink labeled "sugar free" can be accepted as such. Reading labels is important for the diabetic since total caloric intake as well as carbohydrate consumption are key factors in dietary control.

OUTDOOR COOKING. These long, warm, summer evenings are perfect for cooking outdoors. And with beef in good supply in food stores, many people will be barbecuing steaks and roasts on their grills.

To get that delicious smoke flavor, add wood chips such as hickory or oak to the fire. Soak the chips in water at least one hour before using them. They'll burn slowly. Add chips

REFINISHING FURNITURE

Furniture refinishers often wonder what's the best type of finish to apply to redone and new furniture. The answer is simple. Varnish makes an excellent furniture finish. It will produce a hard surface which is more water-proof, alcohol-proof and heat-proof than any other home finish such as shellac, lacquer, oil or wax.

Varnish flows easily and levels well when applied right. It's transparent and provides body and depth to the finish. Varnish is also strong and durable, so two coats are adequate for most home projects. Some disadvantages of varnish are that it takes more time to harden than many other finishes and can't be applied over a lacquer finish. Some varnishes give a satin finish while others are glossy. It's best to use only the type recommended by the manufacturer for furniture.

STAINS. To remove perspiration stains from a garment, sponge the area with diluted vinegar and wash immediately. Yellow stains can sometimes be removed by dabbing the area with a solution of Epsom salts and a little benzene and squeezing moisture out between paper towels. You may have to repeat this treatment several times.

COTTON HERITAGE. Cotton was planted in the first garden established by the colonists at Jamestown, Va., in 1607.

While the first crop failed, experiments in cotton cultivation were made by the next decades. By 1683, cotton apparently was being grown in Carolina on a scale large enough to permit its export to other colonies. Proprietors of the Carolina colony wrote a letter commending the governor on the care he had taken in regard to cotton transported from Carolina to other plantations.

Shortly before the Revolution, cotton was being raised intensively in various colonies chiefly for domestic use.

Its cultivation as a garden crop was so well known in the vicinity of Easton, Md., Cape May, N.J., and Sussex, Del., by 1776 that cotton was grown in these areas to help supply the needs of the American army.

At the same time, colonists in Pennsylvania raised enough cotton to supply their domestic needs.

In the early 1820's cotton also was being grown on a small scale in New York, on the sea board of Connecticut, and on the Wabash River in Illinois.

SOIL SURVEY NEARS COMPLETION

The Coffee County Soil Survey has less than 65,000 acres remaining of the 435,280 acres comprising Coffee County. These remaining areas are located in the northern portion of the county. The Coffee County Soil Survey Party consists of Soil Scientist Joel Childs, and Soil Scientist Mark Arthur Harris.

The survey began July 1, 1972 at the request of the Coffee County Soil and Water Conservation District and in cooperation with the Alabama Department of Agriculture and Industries, is well ahead of other plantations.

These scientists have walked over and surveyed a total of 370,000 acres of land in this county, making soil borings to be used in classifying soils.

The two types of surveys conducted in making these soils by classifications are "Detail," and "Reconnaissance."

The detail soil survey is a type of survey used for moderate land use planning such as tentative guides for planning cropland, woodland, recreation areas, housing, and industry. Reconnaissance soil survey is used for a very broad scope of planning, and usually consist of planning large tracts of land.

Coffee County is situated in the southeastern part of the state and is entirely within the Southern Coastal Plain and the soils vary widely from the area commonly known as south coffee to north coffee. South coffee County being south of the town of New Brockton, and north Coffee County in the area north of New Brockton. Allow me, if you will, to use these two areas to explain the range of contrasting soils. In south Coffee County, which is completely mapped, there are soils that are yellowish brown, reddish brown, and red in color. The texture of these soils range from sandy to clayey. The north Coffee County area is an area which consists mainly of timber land with rolling hills and river terraces. This area has mostly red clayey soils that are somewhat difficult to manage. It is also difficult to make a survey, unless it is in the winter months. The remaining areas to be mapped are located in the northern section of the county, and plans are made to complete this area in the upcoming months.

Where It All Began. When the U.S. constitution was adopted, eight or more of every 10-Americans lived on farms. By 1920, the census revealed for the first time that the majority of the nation's citizens were living in urban areas.
